Members Seek Funds to Restore Liberty Church

They want to restore old Liberty church, part of the history of Saline county.

The church southwest of Harrisburg was organized in 1832 and the organization was in its third building last October when fire came and destroyed everything.

There was a little insurance. Very little. So to restore the church building more money is required and the members are out to get it.

One thing set up to bring in money for the building fund is a singing program to be held at 8 p. m. Saturday, May 5, in Dorrville gymnasium. Three quartets will sing from eight to around midnight and that's a lot of singing for the fifty-cent admission fee. There'll be an intermission and at that time the women of the church will sell refreshments, which will add to the fund.

To sing will be the Harmony Echoes of West Frankfort, the Pathfinder quartet of Carrier Mills and the Dorrville quartet. All of these fine musicians are donating their services for this worthy cause.

MAIL: Since we received that letter several days ago from Michigan inviting Timmo up there to inspect a large hen egg kept under refrigeration, this department has received a couple more notes enclosing the clipping.

First came to me from Chapman, Alabama, and enclosed was the clipping about G. E. Crest's eggs that was carried in the Mobile (Ala.) Register. It was not signed but it must have come from a former local gent because the envelope was addressed like this:

"Mr. Tim O. Turner, Columnist of the Sheet, Harrisburg, Illinois, Saline Co., care of Eddie Wise." Now nobody would have said such a thing as that if he hadn't come from these parts.

The second note did come from a former Harrisburg resident, Curtis Williams. He, too, enclosed the same United Press clipping that was carried in the Long Beach, California, paper. Writing from Lakewood, Calif., Mr. Williams, in the insurance business at Lakewood, had this to say:

"I thought you might like to know you made the news in our Long Beach paper. I formerly lived at 709 South Ledford street in Harrisburg and moved to California in 1952. I enjoyed reading something from the home town."

HUMOR DEPT.: The judge looked up from the bench to see a familiar face before him. He said: "I've had you here for speeding, drunken driving, reckless driving, parking alongside fire hydrants, driving without a license plate and the last time you were here I ordered your driver's license suspended. What's the charge this time?"

"Jaywalking, your Honor," the defendant replied sheepishly.

Fire Dep't Extinguishes Blaze Underneath Loaded Gasoline Truck

The fire department yesterday extinguished a blaze underneath a gasoline truck containing 1,000 gallons of gasoline.

The fire broke out around a pump beneath the tanks on one of Otto Barnett's D-X gasoline trucks in front of the Harding store on Liberty road and the driver, Weldon Tucker Jr., was unsuccessful in dousing the blaze with his liquid chemical fire extinguisher.

The fire department received the call at 3:40 p. m. and raced to the store, where the truck was still afire underneath. The blaze was quickly extinguished with dry chemicals.

Gardner to Join in Meeting With Counties In Shawnee Forest Area

C. R. Gardner, Saline county superintendent of schools, will join with the eight other county superintendents from the nine counties in the Shawnee National Forest at 10 a. m. Friday at Springfield to discuss the need for more school revenues from the forest areas.

The nine counties lose the tax revenue from the areas in the national forest. Instead, they receive money from timber sales, which is very little, it was pointed out.

As a result the superintendents are going to discuss their problem and present it to Vernon Nickell, state superintendent of public instruction.

GOP Leaders Rule Out Tax Cut This Year

Possibility Discussed at Meeting With Eisenhower

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Eisenhower today chilled hopes for a tax cut this year.

He called Republican congressional leaders to the White House to hear a first-hand report from Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey on the government's financial outlook.

The congressional leaders reported after the meeting that present administration estimates of the budget surplus in prospect for the current fiscal year appear to rule out any possibility of tax relief this year.

Hopes for a tax cut had risen in Congress last week when the staff of the Senate-House Economic Committee predicted that the federal surplus for the current 1956 fiscal year would run to about 2 billion dollars instead of the 200 million dollars forecast earlier by the administration.

The administration's 200-million-dollar estimate had been made last January. Mr. Eisenhower told Congress then that the prospective surplus was too slim to warrant tax relief, and should be applied to reduction of the federal debt. The fiscal year ends June 30. There has been no recent official estimate from the Treasury as to how big a surplus is now expected.

Senate Republican Leader William F. Knowland (Calif.) told reporters that GOP legislative leaders had a "general discussion" of the budget and tax situation with President Eisenhower and Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey.

"From present indications there will not be sufficient revenue to justify tax cuts at this session . . ." Knowland said.

Pending definite Treasury figures expected May 20 on actual collections through the income tax deadline of April 15, Knowland said, Humphrey stuck to his January estimate that the 1956 surplus will be about 200 million dollars.

"Even if it should reach 2 billion dollars, which is unlikely," Knowland said, "we still have the problem of (reducing) the national debt."

Knowland said he thought the surplus would have to rise "much higher" than 2 billion dollars before a tax cut could be seriously considered.

Mr. Eisenhower met with Republican Senate and House leaders only a few minutes after he returned to the White House from Gettysburg, Pa., where he voted early this morning in the Pennsylvania primary. It was his regular weekly legislative conference.

Mother Bear Loses Fight to Save Two Cubs from Pack

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Zoo officials told today how a pack of male bears snatched two bear cubs from their mother and killed them. Scores of horrified visitors watched helplessly.

The mother bear, snarling viciously, fought off the five males from one of her cubs for about half an hour Sunday, the officials said. But she was defeated.

Zoo Director Jack Marks said, "I couldn't order anyone into that den. He would have been killed."

The mother bear brought the young cubs, about 2 months old, out into the world for the first time Sunday. Previously she had kept them hidden in a dirt den in the compound.

One of the male bears snatched one of the cubs and killed it instantly.

The second cub was attacked and killed by a large black male as the mother fended off an attack from the other side.

Myler Reports U. S. Will Explode Giant H-Bomb from Air at Bikini Demonstration

Editor's Note: Joseph L. Myler, the author of the following dispatch, specializes in reporting on atomic matters for the United Press. He is one of the 15 American newsmen who will witness and report on next month's H-bomb demonstration in the Pacific.

U. S. officials do not doubt Russia can build a hydrogen warhead for a missile — guided, long-range, short range, or whatnot.

But Air Secretary Donald A. Quarles indicated he believes it will take both Russia and the United States five to 10 years to perfect intercontinental ballistic missiles capable of hurling H-bomb warheads to remote targets in a matter of 30 minutes or so. Big bombers, he says, are still the prime reliance of both nations for H-bomb delivery.

Khrushchev's claim put new urgency into a Senate investigation of whether the United States is falling behind Russia in the race for air supremacy. A special Senate armed services subcommittee headed by Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo.) received Allen Dulles, director of the Central Intelligence Agency today for a third day of secret testimony on Russian air power developments.

Symington, a long-time critic of administration defense policies, said Khrushchev's claim was a "terrible warning" to the United States and the free world if true.

Chairman Clinton P. Anderson (D-NM) of the Congressional Atomic Energy Commission said he believes it "quite probable" that Russia is building an intercontinental missile. Once built, he said, it would "not be too great a difficulty" to add a hydrogen bomb warhead.

Rare Species of Bird

Editorial — BY BRUCE BLOSSAT

While the political sages try to fathom Vice President Nixon's future, it might be interesting to see how vice presidents have fared in the past. The historical record contains some surprises.

Altogether, excluding Nixon, the United States has had 35 vice presidents. Of this total, just six served two terms. The other 29 had but one.

Two of the six, George Clinton and John C. Calhoun, served their two terms under different presidents.

Clinton was elected first with Thomas Jefferson and then with James Madison.

Calhoun held the office under John Quincy Adams and Andrew Jackson.

Only four of the 35 vice presidents served two terms with presidents who themselves were elected for two or more terms.

The four were John Adams under George Washington, Daniel Tompkins under James Monroe, Thomas Marshall under Woodrow Wilson, and John Garner with Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It should be noted particularly that only twice since 1825, at the end of Monroe's second term, have vice presidents been re-elected by incumbent presidents.

And one of those, Garner, was dropped after two of Mr. Roosevelt's four terms.

This country so far has had 11 presidents who were elected for two or more terms.

Thus the vice presidential score is 4 out of 11. If Garner is left out because he was dumped by an incoming president, it would be 3 of 11.

Some might be inclined to argue it should be 3 out of 12, since Henry Wallace, Mr. Roosevelt's vice president from 1941 to 1945, had two chances at the job but was pushed aside after one term.

In summary, it is plain that two-term vice presidents are an extremely lonely band in U. S. history.

Actively Inactive

From the start Governor Harriman of New York has styled himself an "inactive" candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

That is a convenient cover for any man who wants to keep himself available, in the public eye, yet considers it imprudent to enter the primary lists against the avowed candidates.

But, of course, there are degrees of inactivity. And as one or the other of the declared participants stumbles on the long path to Chicago, the definition of inactivity can change. In Harriman's case, it has already changed more than once.

The latest switch came in his signing of the GOP-sponsored state income tax cut. Harriman was on record as rating the measure a bad bill. But after much hesitancy he signed it. No one had much doubt that the action related more to events outside New York than to those within.

Thinking It Over

By Robert L. Dieffenbacher, D. D.
Written for NEA Service

There was once a man who claimed to be an atheist. He set out to make a better world on his own terms and for his own benefit. After a few years he became embittered because people did not agree with him and because they did not fit into his pattern.

One day his wife was seriously injured in an automobile accident. She was given no hope for recovery. The doctor told the believer that only God could have his wife's life.

In desperate, the husband sought for someone who believed in God and who could pray. Ultimately he turned to the man whom he had most wronged. He asked his enemy to pray. He asked that God perform a miracle and prevent his wife from dying.

The opponent in wily conflict agreed to pray if the avowed atheist would also pray. He cried out in agony that he did not know how to pray, because he did not believe in God.

"But you do believe in God and you are praying already," said his new-found friend. "The beginning of prayer is turning to the Being Who is higher than man. You have turned to Him and have asked for a miracle greater than man can perform by himself."

The wife lived, and God came to live in their strangely happy home.

DREW PEARSON Says: Defense Heads Try To Soft-Pedal Gen. Le May; "Mr. Sam" Has Seen Lots Of Sorrow; Army Chief Admits Pentagon Gagging.

WASHINGTON. — The most publicized general of the Air Force, Curtis Le May has been under pressure from civilian bosses of the Defense Department not to talk—at least not very audibly before the Symington committee on lagging air power.

Senator Symington's charge that the Eisenhower administration has let our air strength lag behind Russia has the administration worried, and they have been doing their best to counteract his investigation.

First, Secretary Wilson upped the allotment for giant B-52 bombers by half a billion. Second, the Air Force invited 150 newsmen to San Diego to see the unveiling of its newest, fastest jet.

However, Symington, who was the first Secretary of the Air Force, still claims U. S. air power is behind Russia's, and he has the intelligence reports and the photos from Moscow to prove it.

So General Le May is being called to tell the Senate, in effect, whether Symington is right or his civilian bosses in the Pentagon are right.

This puts Le May very much on the spot.

But if he gives the unadulterated facts, as he has given them privately, Le May will testify that he needs 2,000 B-52's immediately, compared with the 18 now ready to fly. He will testify that the Air Force requires far more men and more widely dispersed air bases than the Eisenhower administration has granted.

MR. SAM'S SORROW

Sam Rayburn who entered the House of Representatives as a young congressman from Texas when Woodrow Wilson became president, has lived to see more human joy and more sorrow than most.

He has lived to become Speaker of the House, and, perhaps even more important, he has lived to see the laws he passed—the Securities and Exchange Commission—become part of the foundation of government.

This winter, however, Sam has had more than his share of sorrow. Early in the winter, his beloved sister, Miss Lou Rayburn, became ill in Texas. Sam had only flown in an airplane once in his life when President Eisenhower requested him to come to Washington. But this time he flew home to his sister's bedside. He was there several weeks.

While Sam was there his nephew, Charles Rayburn, became sick. The doctor operated immediately, but not in time. The nephew died.

When his mother was given the news, Mrs. Rayburn, a heart patient, had a fatal attack—two deaths in the Rayburn family within a day.

Mr. Sam is now back in Washington pushing the business of the sometimes ungainly, unwieldy House of Representatives. But his heart isn't quite in his work the last few weeks.

WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower signed legislation today raising the pay of six-month trainees in the armed forces from $50 to $78 a month.

Two States and Alaska Vote in Primaries Today

President Goes To Gettysburg Farm To Cast Ballot

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Alaska voted today in presidential primaries which may provide a few more clues about how the voters regard the 1956 campaign.

Only Alaska, which has no vote next November, offered a head-on contest between Adlai E. Stevenson and Sen. Estes Kefauver, now the chief contenders for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Although neither has campaigned in the territory, both were entered in the presidential preference vote, which does not bind national convention delegates. Delegates sharing six convention votes will be picked later at the Democratic territorial convention.

The Pennsylvania vote may be interpreted in terms of a popularity contest between President Eisenhower and Stevenson, although the state primary law prevented today's balloting from providing a clear test.

Mr. Eisenhower went to his Gettysburg, Pa., home to vote in today's primary.

The President and Knowland also were both entered in the Alaskan GOP primary. The territory will send four delegates to the Republican convention.

Most Leaders Like Adlai

Pennsylvania will have 74 delegate votes at the Democratic national convention and 70 at the Republican convention. These are chosen in today's primaries and by the state party organization.

Stevenson is now the choice of most of the Democratic leaders in Pennsylvania.

The Massachusetts primaries provided no direct vote on presidential candidates except by write-ins. Kefauver has urged his supporters to give write-in votes to House Democratic Leader John W. McCormack as a favorite son while Americans for Democratic Action have urged a write-in for Stevenson.

Massachusetts Democrats were picking delegates with 40 convention votes in today's balloting, and the GOP was choosing 38 delegates.

Four Israeli Engineers Killed

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel announced today that four Israeli water engineers were killed from ambush less than a mile from the Jordan frontier. It said two of the bodies were cremated in their blazing automobiles.

United Nations investigators tracked the attackers into Jordan. Israel protested immediately to United Nations General Secretary Dag Hammarskjold, who was in Damascus trying to arrange another cease fire in his uphill struggle to restore peace to the Holy Land.

In Damascus, Syrian officials accepted the explanation but conditioned their agreement so heavily it was practically unacceptable to it was practically unacceptable to Israel.

The Syrians demanded that Israel put off indefinitely its plan to draw water from the Jordan River to irrigate the Negev Desert wastelands. Israel already has said she would feel free to go ahead with her irrigation plans.

Du Quoin Man Fined, Sentenced For Swindling

PADUCAH, Ky. (UPI) — A Du Quoin, Ill., man pleaded guilty to a swindling charge and a similar charge against a Cairo man was dismissed today.

Robert Brock, 32, of Du Quoin pleaded guilty to swindling John Engel of Cincinnati, Ohio, out of $5,000. He was sentenced to two years in federal prison and fined $2,000.

A similar charge against Albert Ransom, 44, Cairo, was dismissed by U. S. District Court.

Fifty-year-old Ralph Porter of Nashville, Tenn., pleaded guilty to a swindling charge for the same scheme and was sentenced to two years in prison and fined $1,000.

The three were charged with swindling Engel in a money-changing scheme in Paducah last June 27. FBI agents said they approached Engel with a plan to sell him six $1,000 bills for $5,000 in smaller bills. They said they were seeking to avoid trouble with the Internal Revenue Service over possession of the large bills.

The FBI said Engel ended up with an envelope filled with worthless paper after paying the $5,000. FBI agents arrested Brock and Ransom in Cairo last fall.

The commission will also hold a hearing in East St. Louis Friday.

Khrushchev, Bulgarian Visit Turns Sour

outburst against the Socialists, his jeers at President Eisenhower's aerial inspection disarmament plan, and his statement that Russia soon would have guided missiles capable of putting a hydrogen bomb anywhere in the world.

The talks already have shown little progress, and British sources said Eden feels it is now or never as the discussions enter the final stages.

Khrushchev's speech at a Labor

Party dinner Monday night landed him in the hottest water he had been in since arriving.

He gave an angry brush-off to a Socialist plea for mercy for political prisoners on the grounds there were no Social Democrats in Russia and that what happened to them in other Communist countries was no business of his.

Turns Down Lis.

He turned down pleas from Gait-skell and Bevan and refused even to look at a list of 200 names the Laborites said were Communist prisoners.

Khrushchev also turned down a plea for the Jewish minority in Russia on the ground that anti-Semitism did not exist there.

He also defended the Nazi-Soviet pact and repeated his accusations that Britain and France urged Adolf Hitler to "point to the east."

British newspapers carried such headlines as "Khrushchev Drops the Mask" and "Khrushchev Rows With Gait-skell."

In his reference to disarmament and President Eisenhower's "open sky plan," he told the Laborites that Russia "did not want anybody going into their bedrooms."

Gray Announces House Hearings on Distressed Areas

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Congressman Kenneth J. Gray (D), 25th District of Illinois, today announced that the House had begun hearings on his Distressed Areas Bill, H. R. 10472. Gray said since the "Sink or Swim" rally held at West Frankfort, Illinois on December 31, 1955, there had been great interest displayed by both the Administration and various Members of Congress in finding ways to aid areas of high unemployment.

Gray said the bill now being considered before the House Banking and Currency Committee is somewhat different than the bill he originally introduced as a companion measure to S. 2663, authored by Senator Paul H. Douglas. The southern Illinois congressman said his original bill, H. R. 7902, was referred to the House Ways and Means committee but, due to a heavy calendar, the Ways and Means committee was unable to hold hearings, therefore in order to avoid further delay, it was necessary to delete certain portions of his original bill in order to have the measure referred to the Banking and Currency Committee.

Gray stated the bill now under consideration is inadequate to cope with the serious unemployment problem of southern Illinois and other regions of the United States, however, it will be his strategy to report out the bill under consideration to the Floor of the House where it can be amended. Gray said that he and Senator Douglas are working together on the two measures and he is very hopeful that action will come in this Session of Congress.

The bill introduced by Gray proposes to make loans available to prospective industries as an inducement to locate in a distressed area, and it would provide for technical and financial assistance for much needed public works improvement projects, in addition to other benefits.

Gray urged every citizen in Southern Illinois to write a letter to:

Honorable Brent Spence, Chairman
Banking and Currency Committee
New House Office Building
Washington 25, D. C.

And ask that prompt action be taken on H. R. 10472, the Distressed Areas Bill.

THE STORY: Mike Morrison, an American caught by the 1941 invasion of Greece by the Nazis, has information for British Intelligence. The Germans are tracking him down and now troops have entered Paleachora, the village in which he hides. Mike is in a church with British Army escapees when Eleftheria, a Greek girl brings news that Mike's benefactor Christos has been shot.

XVI

Mike looked up at Eleftheria. Her eyes were those of a crazy woman's. She slid along the wall toward the door. Mike sprang from the bench and grabbed her arm. She screamed hysterically and sunk her teeth into his hand.

German boots coming up the path!

Mike shook her. She opened her mouth to shriek and struggle free. His fist lashed out and thumped against the side of her face. She slumped unconscious into his arms.

"Split up and get out of here!" Mike commanded.

He threw the girl over his shoulder and ran the length of the church toward a small window beside the altar. He pushed Eleftheria through and crawled after.

A thundering crash of a rifle butt against the church door!

Mike lifted the girl into his arms and staggered up the path toward the woods. He ducked behind the first row of trees and sank to his knees and lowered Eleftheria to the ground. He rubbed the numbness from his arms and numbness for breath.

A voice shattered the air. "You bloody Hun! You'll never get away alive!"

A chatter of guns and the voice was still.

Eleftheria stirred on the ground. Her huge eyes snapped open. Mike's hand clamped over her mouth. She shook violently. Mike dragged her to her feet and pulled her through the forest away from the advancing sound of boots.

Faster—faster—the brush ripped their clothes and tore into their skins—faster—from the flashlights, the barking dogs, the commands.

When he was no longer able to carry her, he dragged her limp body—one hour—two hours—three.

Then he fell to the earth, too exhausted to move. He fell beside her and she lay against him sobbing weakly. The sky opened and a torrent of rain lashed their torn bodies.

Eleftheria sat on a boulder, too exhausted to speak and too dried out for further tears. There were no words Mike knew or would ever know to comfort the girl. From the barn loft she had seen Christos shot down in the village square while resisting the Germans and she had seen Melpo bayonetted as she knelt over her husband.

During the confusion of the roundup Eleftheria had managed to escape from the barn along with a few other villagers. Mike's escape had been possible only because the bulk of the German force had been concentrating on a roundup of the villagers while the remaining soldiers were scattered tracking down five escapees. In his short stay in Paleachora Mike had learned the lay of the land and the places where the forest was thickest.

The two of them circled about in the hills all day away from the ashes of Paleachora. From their high vantage point they could see German patrols working, fanning out in a growing circle until they gave up futilely at dusk.

Mike reckoned it was safe enough to risk a small fire. Its warmth revived them. He gathered up several handfuls of pine needles and piled them near the fire, then went to Eleftheria and knelt beside her. Mike knew he could not rove the hills indefinitely. He knew he could not get to Athens, nor could he afford to cut off from the girl. He further knew that no place in Greece would be safe for long from the relentless Konrad Heilser.

"I have a distant cousin, Despo, who lives in Kaloghrani," Eleftheria said. "It is many kilometers away in the hills. You will be safe there."

"No," Mike said. "I must go to Athens."

"The village is so remote that the Germans do not even know it exists. Then I will help you get to Athens. We can reach it by sun-down of tomorrow."

A voice shattered the air. "You bloody Hun! You'll never get away alive!"

A chatter of guns and the voice was still.

Eleftheria stirred on the ground. Her huge eyes snapped open. Mike's hand clamped over her mouth. She shook violently. Mike dragged her to her feet and pulled her through the forest away from the advancing sound of boots.

"This is Jay Linden. He is a soldier of New Zealand and he needs a place to stay."

"Englezos?" the giant inquired.

"Yes,"

The giant was introduced to Mike as Barba-Leonidas and shook his hand with such violence that Mike thought he would tear his arm from its socket. Barba-Leonidas found a shirt for Mike many sizes too large and then inquired if they were hungry.

After the meal, Barba-Leonidas listened intently as Eleftheria unfolded the story of Paleachora.

When Eleftheria had finished, Barba-Leonidas announced, "My only son, Yani, was killed fighting the Italians in Albania. You may have his bed for as long as you wish."

There was something about the direct simplicity of the man that appealed to Mike. He was "real people" — like the longshoremen, the teamsters, the bartenders and the hookers who filled the pages of Mike's books. A quick bond was established between the two.

Seven New Members Added to Billion Dollar Club; Bell Tops Giant Firms

NEW YORK (UPI)—The Bell Telephone System—its assets rising to $14.2 billion dollars—replaced the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. last year as the world's biggest business enterprise, a United Press survey showed today.

The study also revealed that the most prosperous decade in history swelled membership in the "billion dollar club" of American industry from 43 in 1946 to a new peak of 77 in 1955.

Seven companies joined the billion dollar fraternity last year alone. The club is made up of companies with total assets of more than one billion dollars.

The 77 business giants in the club had assets aggregating $223,987,091,633, or enough to buy more than 100 million medium-priced autos or about 1,000 super carriers the size of the U.S.S. Saratoga.

In 1954 these companies had total assets of $208,166,152,236.

Wins Uphill Flight

The Bell System, which will spend $2,100,000,000 for expansion this year, climaxed a dramatic uphill fight to regain the coveted title it lost to Metropolitan in 1951.

Metropolitan and Bell have been fighting for the top spot on the corporate totem pole ever since the 1920s. The lead has changed hands several times over the years.

The Bell System's assets soared $1,630,019,205 in 1955 to a new peak of $14,479,641,983. Metropolitan's assets rose $844,254,390 to $13,935,629,918.

The seven new companies on the club's roster last year were Commercial Credit Co., First Pennsylvania Banking & Trust Co., Western Electric, Philadelphia National Bank, Aluminum Company of America, International Harvester Co., and Anglo California National Bank.

A Bedrock of Strength

Industry's growth the past 10 years has been tremendous. From 1778 to 1945 a total of 43 companies joined the "billion dollar club." In the past 10 years 34 companies have joined the list.

The fabulous postwar growth of American industry has been a bedrock of economic strength for the free world.

The magnitude of last year's dazzling auto boom is reflected in the sharply increased assets of Americas "big three" auto finance companies—General Motors Acceptance, CIT Financial, and Commercial Credit.

The three auto manufacturers in the club—General Motors, Ford and Chrysler—also rang up higher assets in 1955—the first eight million car year in history.

Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), its assets topping the seven-billion-dollar mark last year for the first time, ranked as the world's biggest industrial company. GM was next, followed by such giants as U. S. Steel, Du Pont and Ford.

HOUSEPOWER

MODERN LIVING demands MODERN WIRING!

This means, of course, that you'll be relying increasingly upon the wiring system of your home to provide for lighting, appliances, home making equipment.

If you are building, buying, remodeling or renting, insist on Adequate Wiring... this means,

1. An ADEQUATE ELECTRIC SERVICE ENTRANCE — Having large enough wire and service switch of ample capacity to permit you to use whatever electricity your home may need.

2. ENOUGH ELECTRIC CIRCUITS — Having large enough wires and plenty of branch circuits so that your home equipment, lights and appliances can work at full speed without interference or "slow down".

3. ENOUGH CONVENIENT OUTLETS — In the right locations so that there is always one where you want it to take care of your need. Eliminates unsightly, unsafe extension cord entanglements.

4. ENOUGH PERMANENT LIGHTS AND SWITCHES — Located through the house to protect your family's eyesight, prevent accidents and add beauty to your home. Adequate Wiring is your guarantee of better living... electrically.

Rule Estate of Slain Wife, Suicide Mate Goes to His Heirs

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI)—The Indiana Appellate Court ruled Monday that even though a husband killed his wife and committed suicide a half hour later, his heirs and not hers, are entitled to their joint property.

The case, believed the first of its kind in Indiana, concerned the 1954 deaths of Byrus Bledsoe, 47, and his wife in Evansville. An Evansville bank, representing the estate of the slain wife, had appealed a lower court ruling.

Life is Just a Series of Crises

New Minneapolis-Moline Tractors On Display at Eldorado

CHICAGO (UPI)—Life was a series of crises in Mrs. Norinne Skinner's apartment Monday. First there was the bell in Timothy Skinner's nose. Then there was the bleach in Kathleen Hlidek's stomach.

Mrs. Skinner, 25, told 4-year-old Timothy to blow his nose. He replied: "No, the bell hurts." He shook his head to demonstrate and sure enough, a bell rang.

Timothy's father, Buddy, rushed home to take his son to a hospital where the bell, which the boy had stuffed into his nose, was removed. Meanwhile, Mrs. Elaine Hlidek rushed into the apartment with 22-month-old Kathleen in her arms.

"She just swallowed a cup of bleach," Mrs. Hlidek wailed.

Buddy Skinner dashed home again and took Kathleen to the hospital to get her stomach pumped.

Saline Implement Co., Minneapolis-Moline dealer says, "These new futuristic tractors and farm machines have everything a farmer could desire. Farmers all over America helped design these machines."

Two years ago MM researchers sent questionnaires to farmers, dealers, county agents, and agricultural experts. Most of the questions asked was what these people want in a tractor.

As a result of the questionnaires,

Minneapolis-Moline has produced a tractor which dealer Wilbur Leitch describes as "revolutionary in appearance and mechanical features, but primarily functional in design."

Dynamic streamlining and major advances in engineering make the new MM 445 tractors "the most talked about" in the farm machinery industry. The new 445 has the modern surge-forward look with farm alive power. The 445 tractor and new powermatched implements will be displayed on U.

S. 45, Eldorado, beginning April 24.

Stevenson Attacks Eisenhower Cabinet as Corporate Board

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Adlai E. Stevenson described President Eisenhower's Cabinet today as a "corporate board of directors" providing "government without representation."

Stevenson, a contender for the Democratic presidential nomination, delivered a broad attack on the administration in a speech prepared for the International Education Conference of the United Automobile Workers.

The speech wound up a long weekend of politicking in the capital for Stevenson. He headed for New York this afternoon. He will address a $100-a-plate Stevenson campaign dinner in New York tonight.

Stevenson told the UAW conference that government has been placed in the hands of "a single interest."

He said the Eisenhower Cabinet has contained three men from one corporation but no one to represent the 18 million AFL-CIO members, school children, the aged, farmers and low income families.

"This isn't a meeting of a people's cabinet," he said. "It is a meeting of a corporate board of directors. What single interest government has come to mean for most Americans is simply . . . government without representation."

"And the consequences, in terms of the failure of this administration to meet the human problems of America, have become sharp and clear."

Stevenson said the "businessman's government" refused to worry about "McCarthyism" or, more recently, about mounting racial tensions.

He said the latter could have been prevented if the administration had assumed leadership. He applied the same indictment to the administration's attitude toward labor, social security, highways and polio vaccine.

Stevenson proposed:

1. Giving "first attention" to establishing "true equality of all opportunity in this country, regardless of race, creed or color."

2. A program to help "depressed areas."

3. A program to enable farm families to share in prosperity. He said Mr. Eisenhower's farm bill veto "extended by one full year the most serious threat there is to the whole American economy."

Inmate Tries Hand at Poetry

MENARD, Ill. (UPI)—The coming of spring at Menard State Prison turned at least one inmate's fancy to poetry and thoughts of freedom.

A poem slipped under the door of the prison newspaper office said:

"Spring is here;
De boid is on de wing.
How absid;
De wings is on de boid."
